The Honour Boards of the Adelaide Hills

Preface

Following the publication of “The Monuments of the Adelaide Hills” in April 2015 “The Honour Boards of the Adelaide Hills” is a separate publication that provides a comprehensive coverage of the Honour Boards that list those residents of the Adelaide Hills who served, and in so many tragic cases, paid the supreme sacrifice in the wars involving our nation.

These are memorials that are important to our heritage and our local and national identity.

This publication is the initiative of the Adelaide Hills Council.

The Honour Board is a record of the names of those “that liveth for evermore” and this project is timely, given the 100 year anniversary of the First World War.

In this publication the information on the Honour Board is organised by Town Name and location of the building that houses the Board within that town. The majority of the Honour Boards have been located in Churches, RSL and Institute/Community Halls and Schools. An Index is included which is organised alphabetically by surname and identifies the location of the Board that carries that name.

In many cases names can be found on more than one Board.

The publication includes a discussion regarding the significance of these buildings to the location and preservation of the Boards.

This publication contains a detailed photographic record of each Board and a separate list covers the names on each Board which have been reproduced as they appear on the Board. The reader will note that there appears to be a remarkably individual approach to the subject of an Honour Board, with many different forms across the towns of the Council area, and this makes the content of this project all the more interesting.

The publication identifies towns/locations in the Adelaide Hills Council area that contain Honour Boards, and there are the details of the names of those who gave their lives and those who served. The Memorials largely concern the two major conflicts of the twentieth century and most of them date from the years directly following the First World War.

It is noted that the proximity of towns and their communities has resulted in some repetition of names between Honour Boards - the index of all names is an Appendix to this document.

The passage of time and the wear and tear on some Honour Board has made it difficult to interpret some names. Wherever this has occurred an honest attempt has been made to clarify the name. Whilst some Boards are damaged it is pleasing to note that the majority are in good condition and in many cases in recent times a significant number have been restored by local communities and individuals and given a pride of place within the Hall or School.

A rewarding result of this project is to locate a number of Boards which had, because of the passage of time, been forgotten or mislaid and it is hoped that readers of this account may continue the endeavours that have now started to ensure that vigilance continues to preserve this important part of our national heritage. Suggestions have been made as to a method for undertaking this task.

Significant endeavour has been made to include as much detail in this edition as time and resources allowed. However, it is realised that the reader will, in many cases, be able to add detail or correct information within this first attempt by volunteering knowledge from their own and their family recollections. Such a contribution to this project is considered a worthwhile and essential participation by our community and the reader is invited to submit any comments to the Adelaide Hills Council.

This publication will also be made available on the Council website: www.ahc.sa.gov.au

Section One

Providing a Home for the Honour Boards

The work on this project has determined that Honour Boards are located in many buildings in towns throughout the Adelaide Hills. The function of these buildings varies significantly ranging from Institute/Municipal Halls, Returned Service League premises, Church Halls, Schools and Sporting Clubs.

Upper Sturt Soldiers Memorial Hall

Institute and Municipal Halls

The majority of the Adelaide Hills Honour Boards are housed in buildings that fit this category. In many cases it is understood that the Institute Hall and Municipal premises was the first location of the Honour Board upon its dedication. It is noted that from the early days of the 19th Century Literary Institutes Athenaeums and Schools of Art played an important role in the life of early Australian communities. Among their roles was the provision of libraries and reading rooms, but as community institutions they also provided lectures and adult education.

“By 1900 there were 1000 Mechanics’ Institutes in Australia with memberships of between 100 and 200 people. Most of these Institutes did not have large libraries, usually having less than 1,000 books. Their role in a country town was more a general focus for the community’s cultural activities, not just that of a library. As well as membership subscriptions, the Institutes were supported by colonial governments and sometimes by local government, usually by land grants and cash assistance. The institution generally had a purpose built building in the town.”¹

1. Source of this information is Wikipedia and from “The Guardian-The Workers Weekly Issue 1526 9 November 2011”. Note that the anachronistic term of “Mechanic”, belongs to another time – the early 1800s. In the United Kingdom the word “mechanic” was a more general term meaning tradesman, craftsman, artisan, working man, working class. An institute is a place of learning, so broadly speaking a mechanics’ institute is a place of learning for working class people.

Many of these were solidly built by a community optimistic of the Nation's future but in most cases are now no longer home to those institutions but are still a strong feature in the local communities and are used for other purposes.

Local Government and the governance of the Municipal and District Council in South Australia became widespread in the 1850's with the passing of a series of Acts of Colonial Government.²

The new Councils worked within defined boundaries that covered a large part of settled South Australia and notably established council areas across the Mount Lofty Ranges. The new Acts established the Council, its revenue and its powers of operation. Importantly for this project it committed its community to a base for its meetings and its operations which necessarily involved an office, halls and depots. Thus these became an extension of the assets of the growing hill's communities and therefore another place for the safe keeping of its cherished possessions and its memorabilia. In many instances the Councils became responsible for the established Institute halls.

Stirling RSL Hall

The Returned Services League (RSL)

The Returned Services League has, since 1916, played a significant part in the cultural and political history of Australia. Built on the sacrifice of Australia's men and women in the many theatres of war that have impacted on the short history of our nation its position is embedded in the Australian psyche.

The return of the soldier to Australia necessitated the need to commemorate their contribution and to nurture the camaraderie that grew out of the services. Branches of the RSL were established in all Australian States and sub-branches became involved in large and small communities across Australia. The monument to the fallen and the building that housed the RSL became an integral part of the town and its community.

2. Most notably the An Act to Appoint District Councils and to Define the Powers thereof Act No 16 1852, District Councils Act, No 10, 1858 and the Municipal Corporations Act No 16, 1861

The Mission Statement of the RSL is:

“To ensure that programs are in place for the well-being, care, compensation and commemoration of serving and ex-service Defence Force members and their dependents; and promote Government and community awareness of the need for a secure, stable and progressive Australia.”

The core role and objectives of the RSL has been and continues to be to serve the interests of its members, veterans, the ex-service community and members of the Australian Defence Force. This role has considerable involvement in the community through welfare and other support initiatives including, mental health support and aged care accommodation. Indeed one of the key objectives of the RSL is to provide a “respected and meaningful voice within the community and Australian society” and this has meant in some cases a closer involvement in community activities, particularly in the smaller regional towns of Australia.

There are currently a number of RSL branches operating within the Adelaide Hills Council area and the relevant halls are noted in this publication as containing Honour Boards and the memorabilia from the conflicts that involved servicemen from the local communities.

Church Halls

Honour Boards have also been located in church halls in the Adelaide Hills area. The Church has been a traditional focus for many communities and in some instances, particularly in regard to the First World War; members of a congregation were influenced to enlist in the services.

Sporting Clubs and Places of Employment

There is often a strong bond that forms within a sporting team or, among employees of a particular packing shed, warehouse, bank, bakery or farm; and it is the case that this bond often was the cause of a group of young men discussing the call to enlist and with the zeal that youth brings “joining up” together for the “great adventure”. In undertaking this project there was awareness that certain Honour Boards had begun their early display on the wall of a sporting organisation or business premises and over time as their relevance or significance to those places declined they gravitated to other places.

Schools

The School has been a traditional location for an Honour Board, which may particularly honour old scholars and remind future scholars of the sacrifice that has been made. It is more the case with the Adelaide Hills schools that the Honour Boards they are caring for are there because they have been moved from another place to a school that has been seen as a safe and respectful haven for the on-going care of the Board. This emphasises the theme of this overall project which concerns the need for a particular reverence from future generations which will ensure the preservation of this valuable Australian historical item.

The Adelaide Hills area has schools which have Honour Boards located in prominent places where they will be seen and noted by today's students.

Section Two

The Safe, Secure and Accessible Housing of the Honour Boards

The account of the location of a home for the Honour Boards indicates the importance of such places that now and into the future will continue to be the custodian of these valuable national assets.

Below is a very interesting story that serves as a reminder of the ease with which an Honour Board may be lost but for the sensitivity and vigilance of members of our community.

LOCATING THE MYLOR WORLD WAR 1 HONOUR ROLL

by Margaret Fidock

This story started with the extensions to the Mylor Cotton Memorial Hall in the late 1970s. While construction was underway the Honour Roll was supposed to go to the RSL at Aldgate for safe keeping. This did not occur and it was kept in a shed at a Stirling Councillor's property for over 20 years and unfortunately no-one knew about this.

When the Councillor died the shed and contents were sold at auction. Two men bought and dismantled the shed including the contents and later took the Honour Roll to Melbourne to a war memorabilia auction but didn't get a high enough bid and brought it home to hang in their shed. My husband, Don and I were at an auction in 1992 to buy a sausage-maker for our son-in-law.

One of the men selling the auction items tapped Don on the shoulder and said he had a better sausage-maker in his shed.

There hanging in the shed was our Honour Roll. Tears ran down my face.

The chap said they wanted atleast a $1000 for it!

We did not have the money but decided to put it on our bank card before it was lost again. In the meantime the chap had sent it over to his mate at Bridgewater whose father had fought in the war.

He said if we restored it he would come to its rehangng in its rightful place and there would be no charge.

The wooden frame was in very poor condition but we found a very similar frame on an old picture of our Aunt's at Peterborough and with the help of family we restored the Honour Roll and the frame.

It was rehung in the Mylor Hall at a ceremony on 10 December 1992. Our long search was over and tears flowed as we held it once again.

March 2016

Margaret Fidock's story prompts us to suggest the need to provide a means by which each Honour Board mentioned in this publication should be tagged with a certificate which identifies it, describes it, links it to this publication and indicates its home/ location by an address name and town.

There is no doubt that small communities benefit from the focus that there history can bring. The function and relevance of community halls has changed over time. The traditional "Institute" has been in decline for many years and this asset in many cases is difficult to maintain and in some cases derelict. Often Institutes have been converted to other purposes or attempts to utilise them are hampered by regulatory impediments. Notwithstanding the threats that have accompanied the continuance of our halls in the best condition possible they still serve as a major haven for the Honour Board.

The Honour Boards of the Adelaide Hills Council

Index of Names

Note:

Every attempt has been made to copy the exact details of the soldier from the honour board to this index. However, there may be cases, because of the condition of the board, that the name and other details have been misinterpreted. If the searcher notices this, then they are encouraged to contact the Adelaide Hills Council.

In a number of cases the index indicates that the name of the soldier can be found on an honour board in a number of locations. It is understood that this has occurred because of the relationship of the soldier with a number of hills communities.

Upper Sturt SMH - Refers to Upper Sturt Soldiers Memorial Hall

Upper Sturt UC - Refers to Upper Sturt Uniting Church

Longwood & Bradbury - Refers to Longwood Institute Hall in Bradbury

For details of other locations refer to the photographic record in previous section.
